

50 ways to drain the deep swamp

Jack McCourt – September 2020

The swamp is situated geographically
Inside a beltway which goes on in circles endlessly
Marshy land that once spawned diseases frequently
There must be, fifty ways to drain the deep swamp

They say we have evolved to such a learned state
That our Congressmen work very hard to improve our dreary fate
And all it took was until year two-thousand ten and eight
There must be, fifty ways to drain the deep swamp
Fifty ways to drain the deep swamp

You just fire the lot, Dot

Fill in the hole, Cole

Put them on a train, Jane

And set yourself free

Erect a wall, Paul

Term limits a must, Gus

Defund the PACs, Jack

To get your life back

It seems after sixty years of mulling this a bit
I have concluded the inhabitants do not care for us a whit
And that this swamp, well it stills smells of fetid sh*t
So, no more circumstances and pomp

And as for me and the other pledged deplorables
We must stay the course because our view is inexorable
And know those swampy miscreants are ignorable
And we must, vote again for Donald Trump
Vote again for Donald Trump

No more pay to play, Clay
Just fire the lobby, Bobby
Don't give 'em a chance, Lance
To feed from the trough
Bring in the backhoe, Joe
Send 'em out on a rail, Gail
Remember Enron, Dawn
Just write them off

Imagine if you will a swamp-less government
With voices finally heard by those to Washington we sent
No need to clean up backroom deals and excrement
Time to commence the swamp-romp and stomp

Identify those deep state moles from Obama's reign
We have all been manifestly Strzok by the loyalty they feigned
It's up to us now for our government to regain
There are at least, fifty ways to drain the deep swamp
Fifty ways to drain the deep swamp
